

I was wondering about moving Jefferson to the current Central building and then having 1 High School at the current Centennial/Jefferson Campus where Frosh and Soph could be mainly housed in the Jefferson building while Jrs and Srs would mainly be in the Centennial building with a walkway and common areas (like cafeteria) could be created between the 2 schools. This would allow students to move back and forth (example underclassmen taking higher classes) while still inside the complex. It makes one HS where all students attend and receive same quality of education. Not to mention the athletic facilities are already in place. and would have a larger population to draw from--so, athletics could improve significantly. It seems like the School District could spend a lot less improving what is already there and come out with a better product and still cost less
